

Bloodless Murder

Liana is a Christian woman who lives in a small Midwest town. She has been married to Guthrie for twenty-two years and they have six children. Liana is suddenly challenged with trying to save her family and keep her faith in God while dealing with serious emotional abuse from someone she least expected, her husband of twenty-two years. A debilitating illness has threatened to cripple her and her husband's behavior has become cruel and irrational. She finds her life suddenly falling apart and is left wondering if she ever really knew Guthrie. Liana finally flees for her sanity and health, but Guthrie only continues his cruel games, attempting to convince anyone who will listen that she is crazy and not to be trusted. He is also trying to alienate her six children from her. Instead of correcting his stories about her Guthrie divorces her. Three years after her divorce, Liana is fearing not only for her relationships with her children, but for their health and sanity as well. Her youngest son is so confused and angry that she fears he will take his own life. Guthrie seems oblivious to the emotional carnage he is creating and refuses to stop. This book, based on a true story, shows the harm to children when people remain in the dark about parental alienation/hostile parenting; ignore it and allow it to go unchecked. I hope that this book convinces you how badly hostile parenting needs to stop. Emotional abuse can be described as a bloodless murder. It kills a person's internal self and soul.
